He lays out his ideas for education innovation as well and, finally, makes it perfectly clear why government action is the least effective and desirable fantasy to hang on to. As Stossel says, “It’s not about electing the right people. It’s about narrowing responsibilities.” No, They Can’t is an irrefutable first step toward that goal.

bureaucrats don't succeed because they can't succeed. The very nature of government administration is weighted against success. Here are ten reasons why: I. Knowledge. Government policies suffer from the pretense of knowledge . In order to perform a successful market intervention, politicians need to know more than they can.
